Dear Manning:

I am returning your contract with the increase in salary you asked for. I know this is a little unusual, to have the increase granted so readily, but I do not feel that I want to enter into any long drawn out discussion on the matter. There is no doubt you finished the season, last year in grand condition, and I am sure you will be of a great deal of service to the club this year. The trouble with a raise of this kind is the club expects you to do a great deal more than they would expect for a smaller salary.

However I hope you will have a good season and be worth even more next year.

Very Truly Yours
